Gajanand parents are farm laborers and are bound to work under one landlord because he helped them during crisis by lending them money at high interest. Since they are unable to pay the interest on regular basis, the capital remained intact, while the interest kept piling up thus making it tough for them to repay. Because the wages they both earn will be around 1.50$ out of which the landlord retains 50 cents and hands them just $1.00 which is hardly sufficient for them to buy food for their children. Situation being so tense they are forced to take their son with them to the farm, where Gajanand cuts grass in the farm, just to earn one square meal a day.

Their economic situation is so bleak that unless TAL extends to Gajanand and bring him out of severe exploitation.
